Pastor's Ponderings

I've known two TV repairmen in my life, Charlie and Walt.

We got a color TV in the mid 60's and we were lucky enough to get seven channels because we were so close to New York City. If you were around in the mid 60's you know what the TV looked like, a console with a bunch of dials, buttons and adjustments and a penchant to "go on the fritz" at any time.

Charlie became a close friend. Every couple of weeks or so it seemed, he was in our house fixing the "set." We joked about putting up a cot for him and charging him rent (yeah ha, ha, ha... the dollars flew out the window, because he did give us a bill.) You remember the drill, a tube would go and the picture did some kind of insane vertical roll. Another tube in a week or two would be "kaput," and suddenly the image on the TV tube was nothing more than an intense point of light in the exact center. Or the color was out, or one of the colors was out, or the picture was fuzzy.....

A million tubes for a million problems and everyone in turn would blow. Got to call Charlie!

I saw my first Yankees game with my Dad and Charlie. Seriously, he became that much of a friend. All those long hours with Charlie hunched behind the set with his army of soldering irons, screwdrivers and electronic meters, we had plenty of time to talk about family, (wife, two kids), and religion (he was Russian Orthodox), and politics (what's up with Lyndon Johnson?)

In the late 80's and early 90's Walt was a member of my congregation in Absecon. He wasn't so much a house call kind of TV repairman, it was more you brought it to him in his shop. But his shop and garage were full of TV's and parts of TV's. The longer we were in Absecon the less and less business Walt had. It's not that he wasn't a top notch, fair and honest repairman. But he'd tell us that TV's 'now a days' had less and less tubes and were more solid state with transistors and the like. Not only did solid state circuits last longer and were more reliable, when they did go they were harder and more expensive to replace. Instead of customers asking Walt to fix their TV, he'd tell them how much it would cost and they'd just buy a new one. Hence his rapidly growing collection of TV and TV parts. They were just abandoned in his shop and Walt would try to salvage as many parts from them as he could, to bring down the repair costs of those who did want their TV repaired.

Now most TVs entertain us for years, problem free. And often when they do break it's because of an outside force or substance, like a lightning strike or a glass of milk that was spilled inside the console. With HDTVs, if the TV operates up to the warranty date, it probably is not a lemon, and will last for many years to come. Is there such a thing as a TV repairman anymore?

There is a trend of higher reliability and dependability. Televisions, most electronics, and appliances need less fixing now than their counterparts 30 years ago. They are also less expensive (adjusting for the cost of living) than they were 30 years ago, but the cost to repair them has gone up. The majority are throw away items, that cost more to fix than replace. If it breaks it doesn't pay to fix it.

I wonder then about human reliability and dependability and cost. What does God think about fixing us when we're "on the fritz" or should God just throw us out because to fix us is not cost effective?

Luckily Charlie and our Lord have a lot in common. We know that we breakdown- physically, emotionally, morally or spiritually at a rate that would make Charlie swoon.

But God does not give up on us- throw us out- find a new one to replace us. His warranty on us never expires. There are no throw away people. Instead there is always love, and forgiveness for the second, third, 89th, 247th or millionth chance to be fixed no matter what the cost.

Because Jesus has paid the price already.

Church Board Highlights September 18, 2019

It was reported that the Joy group had a good first meeting of the fall with 10 people in attendance for lunch and to hear Linda Henne speak about her Kennel business.

Pastor Dave noted that the book club is getting setup to do another book called "Imagine Heaven." Pastor Dave also noted about the upcoming UCC fall meeting and needing a delegate to attend that with him.

James noted that he will not be using his scheduled September 20-30 vacation time. Also, he reported that he sent in a shipment of used cell phones which did not yield any payment as the phones that were collected were too obsolete and no longer purchased by the company.

The property committee reported that on August 18, the fire company was called to the church for a burning smell inside the church. Upon investigation it was determined that there is a problem with the cove lights inside the church. The fuses have been removed for these lights to assure that they cannot be turned on by accident. Schatz electric was called to check into repairs for this issue. We are awaiting some pricing options from them. It was also noted that a few dying trees have been removed from the property.

The Lift youth group is working on a Trunk or Treat event for October 20 at the fellowship hall.

As was discussed, we are going to look to plan a coffee hour event after the success of the Sundae Sunday event. After discussion, it was decided to do a last Sunday of the month event to start. We will look to begin this event on November 24 after the 10:15 service. The idea will be that the church provides the beverages and congregation members bring goodies. A signup sheet will be posted in the narthex.

Pastor Dave reported that he is required to acquire some continuing education credits to maintain his standing. One of the events to accomplish this is the Bishop's conference which is coming up November 5 and 6 at the Shawnee Inn. The cost to the church would be $175 for Pastor Dave to attend. After some brief discussion, the board approved this expense.
